Before you get started: Some helpful explanations Before you really get started and get familiar with the English alphabet, we have some helpful information for you: The pronunciation of individual letters and letters within words In this unit, we will show you how to pronounce each letter of the alphabet, as you would do for example when spelling something out. Note that the pronunciation of letters changes when they are pronounced as part of a word. A good example of this is the letter y, which, when pronounced as an individual letter, sounds like /wai/. However, when "y" is a part of a word it will often be pronounced like /i:/ (usually when it comes at the end of a word, such as in family). Differences between British and American English When pronouncing the English alphabet, it is important to differentiate between British English and American English: For example, the letter "z" is pronounced differently in British English than in American would pronounce this letter as /zi:/ (zee). Another important difference is the pronunciation of the letter "r". This is pronounced as /a:/ (aa) in British English and as /ar/ (arr) in American English. In this lesson we will teach you the American pronunciation of the individual letters! The letters in Phonetic Transcription of each letter (for example / wai / is the transcription of how to pronounce "y"). Learning the phonetic transcription of the letters will help you learn the pronunciation of the alphabet faster as well as remember it better. NOTE: At this point, it is much more important for your child to know the sounds of the letter names will be very useful for spelling, but we are not there yet! Reading precedes spelling! There are over one million words in the English language, and at least 600,000 of them can be sounded out phonetically. ↑ Top 2. Vowels The five most common vowel sounds are also known as the short vowels: A (as in apple), E (as in egg), I (as in it), O (as in odd), and U (as in up). All the vowel sounds are continuant sounds, said "long and loud," which means that you draw them out for two full seconds. ↑ Top 3. Consonants The consonants are the other 21 letters in the alphabet aside from the vowels: B, C, D, F, G, H, J, K, L, M, N, P, Q, R, S, T, V, W, X, Y, and Z. There are two types of consonant sounds are: B, C, D, G, H, J, K, P, and T. They have a sharp ending, with the sound stopping abruptly. Continuant sounds are also called "long and loud" sounds. Letters making these sounds are: F, L, M, N, Q, R, S, V, W, X, Y, and Z. Hold these sounds out for two full seconds. 1 Top 4. Notation We have a special way of writing the letter sounds, so that you (the adult) know when you should say the name of the letter and when you should say the letter sound. The stop (quick and quiet) sounds are written as a single letter between two slashes. For example, /b/ or /g/. Because these sounds are quieter and short, you may have to say them multiple times for children to hear. So we will sometimes instruct you to say "/b/ /b/ /b/," meaning you should make the /b/ sound three times in quick succession. The continuant (long and loud) sounds are usually written as three letters between two slashes. For example: /mmm/ or /zzz/. This is to remind you that continuant sounds or word parts with a pause in between. We write that pause with a bullet mark (•). One bullet mark represents a half-second pause. So, "/mmm/ • /at/" is the word mat split by a half-second pause in the middle. ↑ Top 5. Easier and Harder Sounds The continuant (long and loud) sounds - F, L, M, N, Q, R, S, V, W, X, Y, and Z - are easier for children to hear than the stop (quick and quiet) sounds. NOTE: A lot of children get confused because the lower-case letters b and d look so similar. As you start using phoneme cards (with individual letters) in the Phonemic Awareness games, we strongly recommend that you not show the d card until much later. Let the child develop a deep familiarity with the letter b; until then, you can reference d as simply "not b." It is much better to simply separate out the introduction of these two letters. ↑ Top 6.
